PEER SUPPORT IN YOUTH WORK - training organisations to apply peer-to-peer methodology

Training course for youth organisations

Peer Support in Youth Work is an Erasmus+ training course for organisations that want to strengthen their capacity to use peer-to-peer methodology in youth work, especially in the field of youth wellbeing and prevention of anxiety.

The training is designed for organisational teams composed of young youth workers, who will take part as peer leaders, and experienced youth workers, who will take part as mentors. Together, they will learn how peer-to-peer support can contribute to creating safer, more connected and more empowering environments for young people.

Participants will explore how peers can have a meaningful role in prevention and early support: by strengthening connection, encouraging participation, reducing isolation and helping young people develop personal and social resources. At the same time, the training will clearly define the limits of peer support and the situations in which young people need to be referred to mental health professionals.

The course will combine theoretical input, experiential learning, practical workshops, reflection and organisational planning.

Participants will learn how to apply the peer-to-peer methodology we have developed and adapt it to their own organisation and local community.

Key learning objectives

By the end of the training course, participants will:

- Understand the theoretical foundations relevant to the implementation of peer-to-peer methodology, with a focus on the Positive Youth Development approach.
- Learn how peer-to-peer methodology can strengthen young people's competence, confidence, self-awareness and connection with others.
- Understand how peer-to-peer approaches can contribute to youth wellbeing and prevention of anxiety, while respecting the limits of peer support.
- Get familiar with practical tools and guidelines for leading peer-to-peer workshops with young people, especially youth with fewer opportunities.
- Empower young youth workers to take an active role as peer leaders in preparing and facilitating peer-to-peer activities.
- Empower experienced youth workers with theoretical understanding and practical guidance on how to mentor and support young peer leaders.
- Reflect on how to adapt and implement peer-to-peer activities within their own organisation and local community.

WHO CAN APPLY

This training course is intended for organisations only. Individual applications are not possible.

Each organisation should apply with a team composed of young youth workers and experienced youth workers who will participate together and later support the implementation of peer-to-peer methodology in their organisation.

Minimum team per organisation:

- 1 experienced youth worker / mentor
- 2 young youth workers / peer leaders

Maximum team per organisation:

- 2 experienced youth workers / mentors
- 4 young youth workers / peer leaders

Experienced youth workers / mentors

Mentors should be experienced youth workers with more than 5 years of direct work with young people. They should have real experience in leading and facilitating groups, supporting young people in group settings and providing guidance in youth work processes.

Their role during and after the training is to support young youth workers, help them prepare and reflect, ensure psychological safety and guide the responsible implementation of peer-to-peer activities.

Young youth workers / peer leaders

Young youth workers should be actively involved in youth work and should have at least one experience of direct work with young people.

This means that they should have experience in facilitating or co-facilitating activities, working with groups, supporting young people or taking an active role in youth programmes. Logistical or administrative support alone is not enough.

Their role is to learn how to use peer-to-peer methodology, support their peers through structured activities and contribute to creating safe, inclusive and connected youth work spaces.
